WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—General Woodford, United States Minister to Madrid, starts from Paris for San Sebastian tomorrow to present to the Queen Regent a proposition from the State Department for ending the Cuban War.

Woodford's instructions are definite and conclusive and President McKinley looks to him to secure a positive reply at an early date. If Spain fails to respond satisfactorily in the preliminary negotiations it is believed Woodford's instructions authorize him to give the Spanish government to understand that the United States will not permit anything to intervene until the matter has been finally disposed of. Assistant Secretary of the State, Day, will have charge of the conduct of the negotiations and he will practically supersede Sherman.

Children's Day Exercises.

Those who attended the Children's Day Services at Grace M. P. church yesterday morning at 11 o'clock enjoyed a treat. The singing and music was excellent, the solo by Zeb V. Taylor being enjoyed greatly.

The exercises and recitations by the children were splendid, and reflected much credit on those who had their training in charge.

The address by Rev. J. F. McCulloch was a gem. In addition to being a highly refined and educated gentleman, Mr. McCulloch is a fine speaker. He handled his subject well on this occasion.

Preparations are being made for an interesting and exciting game of lawn tennis at Blandwood court tomorrow afternoon at 5 o'clock. The best players in our city will be engaged in this game and some fine playing may be expected.

JUST FROM THE GOLD FIELDS

A KLONDYKE NEIGHBOR IN THE CITY TODAY.

A "Telegram" Man Gets an Interview. He is One of the Latest Arrivals from the Eldorado.

Col. James Penn Watson, who has been assistant secretary to the late Consul at Victoria, B. C., passed through the city today on the noon train en route to his home in Virginia.

A TELEGRAM man asked him what effect the Klondyke fever, on the western coast, would have on the commerce of the country.

"Seattle, in our country, and Vancouver and Victoria have been rushed to clear vessels loaded with supplies for the Klondyke. I think the large shipments will keep up, at least until the rush next spring. The principal cargoes are wheat, flour, meal, bacon and canned goods, and will be needed."

"How about the 'Arabian Nights' tales of untold gold?"

"I do not consider them as excessive at all. I have seen and viced the papers of over 2,000 men going to the Klondyke country and have only had to vice return passes for two men. If there was no gold, or if it was a fake, the consul would have been a regular rendezvous for returning adventurers, who would have asked the good offices of the Consulate to help them on home."

"What effect will this have on the monetary system?"

He smiled. "Well, I am not a capitalist, but if all the gold I have seen and heard of, that I know of, comes in in a bunch, it will raise cain with the pre-arranged plans of some one."

"Whose plans?"

"I am not at liberty to express anything further."

"Will you go back?"

"No. I have enough of that Western coast, gold or no gold, and I frankly say to any intending gold seeker, if you have a family, your life, or your chances of life, cannot atone for your absence from them for the time needed to amass a fortune for them and then come back a perfect physical wreck. No man from this climate can survive it long enough to make it pay his family and himself. I have not been in 1,000 miles of it, yet a whole bushel of the finest Klondyke nuggets would not tempt me back."

"Your wife is here is she not?"

And his smile would have done your heart good.

They Can't Keep Away.

J. G. Foushee, of Gulf, this morning purchased a lot on North Elm street, adjoining C. M. Vanstory, upon which he will build at once. The residence will be a handsome one, in keeping with the other buildings in that neighborhood, and will be occupied by Mr. Foushee's family, who are already here.

Mr. Foushee married a daughter of Mrs. L. A. Smith, and is connected with the Durham & Charlotte railroad. He and his family will find a warm welcome in Greensboro.

Dr. Kilgo Tomorrow Night.

The address of Dr. J. C. Kilgo, at West Market street church tomorrow night, will be worth hearing. His theme will be "Christian Education," and will give you someting to think about.

Hon. J. H. Southgate, chairman of the board of trustees of Trinity College, will also be present and make a speech.

Mr. Southgate is one of the finest orators in the state. Go out and hear these able speakers.

Union Meeting Tonight.

A union meeting of all the young people's religious societies of the city will be held in West Market street church this evening. Delightful music will be rendered and short talks and addresses made by members of the various societies.

The public is cordially invited to attend this service.

From Salisbury to Raleigh.

The colored excursion from Salisbury to Raleigh passed through today a little after 10 o'clock. There were eight cars attached to the train, and quite a crowd of dusky maidens and gallant beaux were on board.

A Runaway.

A horse, hitched to a load of lumber, took a notion today about noon to run and he ran. He went down West Market street at a two-forty gait and strewed lumber along the street as he ran.

GAMBLING IN THE MEADOW.

Officers Make a Raid on the Den and Three Escape.

Yesterday afternoon Officer Scott learned that a crowd of negroes were gambling in what is known as the old Tom Morehead barroom, an old building just below the city market, down in the "Meadow." He and Policeman Jeffries went down and found six negroes upstairs engaged in a game of cards.

When the gamblers became apprised of the presence of the officers there was a wholesale scattering. Three of them jumped from the second-story window to the ground and escaped. The other three were arrested and locked up.

This afternoon they had a hearing before Mayor Nelson, and were sent on to court.

His Life Ebbing Away.

Mr. J. E. Thom, one of the oldest citizens of our city, has been ill for some time, but was thought to be improving. He was able to be up and about last week. Late yesterday afternoon he was taken worse, sinking into a stupor from which he has not recovered. His condition is not improved this afternoon, and the end is nigh.

Mr. Tom is eighty-one years old, and is the father of Mrs. Mary E. Thacker. He has but one other child, a son, who lives in Missouri.

LATER.—Mr. Thom died at 4 o'clock.

An Excellent Sermon.

Rev. R. W. Weaver's sermon at the Baptist church yesterday morning on the "Place of Mystery in the Teaching of Jesus" was an exceedingly able effort. For thirty-five minutes he held the closest attention of his congregation by his wealth of thought, beauty of expression and deep sincerity. It was an effort worthy of a man of riper years.

A Bad Fall.

Mr. John Sampson, who lives on Asheboro street, sustained serious injuries from a fall Saturday afternoon. He was out in his flower garden and when he started back into the house he stumbled and fell at the doorsteps, breaking a rib and hurting his head.

Mr. Sampson is exceedingly old and feeble, being in his ninetieth year, and is little able to stand such a shock.

The Cape Fear and Yadkin Valley railway has turned $5,173 taxes into the State treasury.

SOUTHERN HISTORIES.

The action of the Grand Army of the Republic in passing resolutions condemnatory of southern school histories is both surprising and painful.

The question has been raised by that class in the north which never allows an opportunity to insult or slur the south go unimproved; nay more, which does so in and out of season. The action of the latter can be passed with that silent contempt which is the only reply a decent man may make to the purveyor of foul-mouthed abuse. One expects no better of the cowardly jackals who fattened off of the nation's misfortunes, and who are still barking at a people they did not have courage to bite, thirty years ago. Their consciences, perhaps, grow restive, if they have any, when they recall how present luxury is sprung from the moudly croakers and decayed beef they sold to the men who were at the front under Grant and Sherman, battling for the right, as they saw it. The men, and the descendants of the men, who won their chevrons in fraudulent government contracts instead of in battle, are not expected to understand the attitude of Southern men, then or now. But from the men who faced cold steel for their convictions, the south did expect something better. She expected that they should understand her position; should have the discernment to see that to honor the men who defended her in the sixties is no disloyalty to the union now.

The charge that is brought against southern school histories is that they are written from the southern point of view. From what other point of view should they be written? We are acquainted every school history, whether northern or southern, used in southern schools; we know the southern history to be more fair and impartial than the northern. The latter, almost without exception, employ the arts of the special pleader instead of the calm, clear statement of the historian. We can name northern histories, used in southern schools today that misrepresent facts, mis-state the number of men engaged in battle, claim victories where no victories were won; histories in which authors started with the fundamental thesis that all southerners were traitors and dealt with the facts of the civil war from that point of view.

We do not contend for a moment that southern histories are faultless. Some of them are even partizan in a degree, possibly, but there is in them all that chivalrous treatment of an enemy that has always characterized southerners. What they wish to convey, whether fact or inference, is said openly and plainly and they do not descend to covert insinuation of what they dare not state boldly, nor do they assume as facts what cannot be proved.

We are still too near the civil war to get that perspective which is essential to the writing of impartial history. There are very few histories that are written in drylight. When we remember that Gibbon and Hume, McCauley and Giuzot, writing of events long past, are all open to the charge of partiality, we need not expect more of the historian who has a father or brother buried on the battle fields of Virginia or who still suffers twinges from a wound received there himself. Written from the Southern point of view? We grant it. At least there is no attempt to conceal the point of view, in order that publishing houses, and the author, may reap a reward from a people stealthily traduced in the minds of their children, or ease a heart, still malicious and vindictive, by fumbling purses fat with the price of convictions.

It is not enough that the South pays millions of dollars to Northern publishers for her text books of various kinds; she must go to New York and Boston to buy charges of treachery, done in cloth, against the men who defended her thirty-five years ago. It is not enough that she pays her share, and more than her share, of a pension that keeps the Northern soldiers, wounded in battle, and hundreds who never saw battle at all, in luxury, but she must also pay for the privilege of having her children taught that the man who did the wounding in her defense was a was a traitor and only suffered to go unhung by reason of Northern magnanimity.

This resolution was unworthy of the Grand Army of the Republic. It has lowered it in the eyes of unbiased men, North and South, and justified the quip that the "South can forgive the North for whipping her, but the North cannot forgive the South for being so hard to whip." It was officious meddlesomeness, poor alike in spirit and in taste. We make no complaint that histories used in northern schools are written from the northern point of view. Since an absolutely impartial history is impossible at this time, the best that can be done is for each to use its own histories or use both.

It was somewhat superfluous for the G. A. R. to resolve that "patriotism shall be taught in our public schools." There is a Grand Army in the South as well as in the North; in case of war as large a percentage of it would shoulder a musket in defense of the flag as of any other Grand Army whatsoever. Any contrary imputation is unworthy of the brave men who met last week at Buffalo.

While an old veteran sits by a Southern fireside we will honor him, honor him as the patriot he is, and when he "dreams of battlefields no more" we will honor his memory—to do less would be infamous.

THE TELEGRAM has finished the first month of its journalistic life and it is only fitting that we should thank our citizens for the warm appreciation they have shown of our efforts to give them the best paper the field will warrant. Our reception has been quite up to our expectations. We begin a new month with the strengthened purpose to more fully merit the cordial support we have received.

LETTERS commendatory of Governor Russell's course in the Railroad Commission scrap are pouring in upon him. His official thunder is beginning to have an echo.

"Red Buck's" Second Insists on the Original Weapons.

"Red Buck's" second regrets to say to say that he is in total ignorance of the name, surname, title or designation of Buck Newton's seconds, and is therefore, compelled to speak ex parte, as it were, on the subject of weapons. He is not disposed, however, to grant the contention of the Washington Post that the challenger has the choice of weapons. He holds that the recent duel of the Post and Sun is not to be taken as establishing a precedent.

He insists, therefore, that the combat be with the weapons first mentioned, unless the seconds of Buck Newton shall develop a too insistent pugnacity, in which case he will suggest that the weapons be long distance telephones.

Rather than accede to the use of so plebean a weapon, and one so apt to go wide of the mark, as the irish potato "Red Buck's" second will feel justified in declaring the duel off.

His flights of poetical fancy are sublime; his manner of speech is superb, and his facts and figures are convincing, while all the while he pleases and entertains.

"His subject last night was a broad one: 'The church's opportunity in the Sunday school,' and he handled it in that broad and liberal spirit for which he is noted, and the Journal regrets that a lack of space forbids its entire publication."

North Carolina as She Is.

Mr. Jos. G. Brown, president of the Citizens' National Bank, of Raleigh, described North Carolina as follows to the National Bankers' Association at Detroit:

"Like all sections of this country, North Carolina has suffered from the long period of depression, but we believe now we are beginning to see the brightening of the dawn, and we are confidently looking forward to the bursting of that full-orbed sun of prosperity of which we have been hearing this morning. Our average width is only about 100 miles, but extending from east to west we run nearly five hundred miles, and I am told that toward China we run fully 8,000 miles. Turn us upside down, and use our highest western mountain peak as a pivot, twirl us about, and as we swing around the circle; the waving rice crops of eastern North Carolina would scatter their pearley grains upon the waters of your great lakes, along and beyond the valley of the Missippi, and down upon the bosom of the majestic gulf whose waters lay at the far south. So you see we are a far-reaching State in many directions. I am glad to say to you that our banks are in excellent condition. We have no very large banks, it is true, nor have we any very large cities. I wish we had, for then we could entertain this association at one of its couventions. We would be glad to give you a taste of North Carolina hospitality, which I verily believe, almost equals the rich hospitality to which we have been treated here." (Applause.)

A BETTER DYNAMO BOUGHT.

HIGH POINT HAS MADE ANOTH- STRIDE FORWARD.

It Will Probably be Put in at Once--- Advocates a First-Class School Library.

TELEGRAM BUREAU, }
HIGH POINT, N. C., Aug. 30, '97. }

High Point has just made another bound to the front. For years we have needed an electric dynamo for supplying incandescent lights. The dynamo now used does excellent service and has been supplying both arc and incandescent lights; this is not only dangerous, but it is a third greater output than the supposed capacity of the the dynamo would permit. The board of aldermen has been negotiating for another dynamo, and on Thursday they received a proposition from the General Electric company of Augusta, Ga., which they have decided to accept with a few amendments. This decision was reached at a special meeting of the Board, called Thursday night for that purpose.

There is no doubt, it is thought, as to the company's accepting the conditions, and the new dynamo will be put in right away. It will supply light for from 500 to 700 incandescent lights, and with the patronage tnat is expected will pay for itself in two or three years.

For a School Library.

In this week,s Enterprise Supt. Geo. H. Crowell makes an appeal for donations and contributions toward building up a first-class school library. Either money or books will be acceptable. This is a work that every person in High Point ought to fall in line with at once. The best way to get this library movement fairly started is for every one in town to look through his or her collection of books and select one for the school, and send it to Prof. Crowell right away. No one need miss one book and yet the good that it may do can hardly be calculated.

The examination for entrance in the graded school will begin Sept. 7. Now let each parent place a book in the hands of his child to be carried to Prof. Crowell on examination day. This will get the children themselves interested in the library, and make them feel a pride in it as something that they have helped to build up. There is no reason why a collection of a thousand volumes should not be ready for use on the opening day of the school.

It would help matters if one of our papers would open its columns for the publication of all books donated, with the names of the donors. This would show the public what is being done, and incite a laudable rivalry among our people in this good work. It makes no difference if several copies of the same book are sent in, as Prof. Crowell says separate class libraries will be placed in the different grades.

We live in a county that has long been noted for its educational work; we live in a town that is famous for its progressive business men; we have a school building that we can point to with pride, and a superintendent we are all proud of. Let us all come together and hold up Prof. Crowell's hands in the noble work he is doing among us, for it is only with the support of the town that he can succeed.

An Able Discourse.

At the Presbyterian church last night Dr. Egbert W. Smith preached the third in a series of sermons on character, the first two having been delivered during last month.

He took as a text the passage, "My grace is sufficient for thee." No one could have heard this sermon without being benefitted. The Doctor dealt with two kinds of difficulties that have to be overcome by the grace of God.

In the first part of the discourse he showed that man is not a helpless creature of circumstances, but is given a power from above by which he can master and overcome all his environments. And, secondly, Dr. Smith stated that not only might a man master his surroundings, but that no man could be tempted from within by passions, appetites or inclinations to a greater extent than the grace of God would enable him to withstand.

At the close of the service special prayer was made by the senior pastor for Mr. Thom, one of the oldest members of that church, who was reported to be very ill.

PREACHING IN THE MEADOW

May Develop Into a Camp Meeting Ground.

The "Meadow" gives promise of developing into a camp meeting ground—on Sundays, at least. For two or three Sundays A. F. Moore has stood up and and proclaimed the gospel to the inhabitants of that locality. Yesterterday afternoon he was there on schedule time and soon had a crowd around him.

There was one auditor upon whom, apparently, little impression was made. He was an old colored brother who came upon the scene of action in the early part of the service. He had probably been in the "meadow" before, for he was full of "bug juice," and when he sat down to listen to Moore break the bread of life, he doubled up on the ground and went to sleep. When Moore stopped preaching he was still asleep, and in this condition the crowd left him.

Policeman Scott went down and attended to his case, giving him a birth in the city "cooler."
